FRANKFORT CHURCH 70 YEARS OLD

ST. PETER'S FOUNDED IN OCTOBER 1867

The St. Peter's Evangelical church of Frankfort, is making elaborate preparations for observance of the 70th anniversary of the organization of this church body. The occasion will be celebrated on Sunday October 24 with special morning and evening services.

In addition to the observance of the founding of the congregation, a re-dedication service will also take place in honor of the re-building of the pipe organ and a thorough renovation of the church building. A complete program will be printed in next week's issue.

The St. Peter's congregation was organized on Reformation Day, October 28, 1867, by the following charter members: John Bobzin, G. Peter Feldon, John Neiland, Benedict Baumgartner, Phillip Lenhardt, Peter Koerner, Martin Muff, Simon Hohenstein, Fred Leppla, Louis Mohr, John Muenger and Rev. W. Mayer the later of Mokena.

This small group of religious minded men, immediately proceeded to raise funds for the erection of a house of worship and at the first meeting $537 were subscribed toward the building fund.

After the congregation had been formed, the Rev. F. Menzel, pastor of St. Peter's Evangelical church in Green Garden Twp., was engaged to conduct bi-weekly afternoon services in the old Baptist church, which at that time, stood where the Peter Folkers residence is now located in the village of Frankfort.

Work on the new edifice was rushed along and the young congregation was indeed happy to be able to dedicate their own church home on July 1, 1868. This building was erected at the cost of $2,182.00 and served the congregation as its house of worship until 1916, when the present church was completed.

The first resident pastor of this congregation was Rev. F. Walter who served from 1873 to 1881. One of the most important events of this period was the organization of the Ladies Aid Society in 1875.

In 1881, Rev. Mr. Walter accepted a call to another church and Rev. C. Krumm was chosen to fill the vacancy. The latter served the congregation until 1887 and he was followed by A. J. G. Aed, who remained only until September 1888. The church was then temporarily served by Mr. F. Braun, a student of theology from Eden Theological Seminary, St. Louis, Mo., who remained until 1889 when Rev. G. Lambrecht entered upon his work in Frankfort and continued in his work here until his death in December 1925.

Following the demise of Rev. Mr. Lambrecht, the present pastor, Rev. G. Gerhold, came to supply the pulpit in 1926 and in June of the same year, he was chosen pastor of this church.

In 1912 the congregation found the old edifice inadequate for its needs and it was decided to build a new church. A building fund was created and in 1915 the building was begun at an approximate cost of $20,000. The building was completed and dedicated on February 6, 1916.

In 1923 a new pipe organ was installed at a cost of $4300. In 1926 a new modern parsonage was begun at a cost of $14,900 and was dedicated December of the same year. This year $3300 were contributed to a fund for making repairs, alterations and new installations.

World Traveler To Speak In Mokena Church

Sunday October 17th at 7:45 p. m., Leon Roy Livingston, the world's A. No. 1 Wanderer, will speak in St. John's church.

This is an opportunity knocking but once, so don't miss it. You will hear things you haven't heard before because he is an extraordinary and unusual man.

Come out and hear this most interesting traveler tell of his travels.

FIRE DESTROYS FITZER HOUSE; $6000 LOSS

Fire, supposed to have started by a spark falling from a chimney onto a shingle roof, destroyed a large farm house on the old John Fitzer farm on Lincoln Highway east of New Lenox about five o'clock Thursday afternoon. The fire spread very rapidly thru the seven room house. Household goods on the first floor were partly saved, but everything in the second floor fell prey to the flames. It is reported that watches and diamond rings were destroyed in the fire.

The Mokena Fire Department was called. They responded with their fire truck, but found the farm house beyond saving, so turned their attention on the nearby barns and out-buildings and saved them from catching fire.

The loss is estimated at about $6,000.00.

Flag Presented To Homer School

Miss Sophronia McCroskev, Chaplain and Flag chairman for the Louis Joliet chapter of the D. A. R., presented a large silk American Flag, Columbus Day, to the newly formed Junior American Citizen Club in Well's Corner school, District 131, in Homer.

This is the first group to form one of these clubs sponsored by the D. A. R., and it has chosen the name "Florence Nightingale". Miss Helen Nemeth is the teacher under whose supervision the club will function.

Mrs. Dorrance D. Snapp, regent of the Louis Joliet Chapter and several other members were present. Miss Frances M. Delaney, assistant Supt., of Will County schools, gave a short address after the presentation of the flag.

Joliet Legion Post To Present Show

Harwood Post No. 5 of The American Legion has taken advantage of the presence of a former New York theatrical producer in Joliet, namely Ralph Dunbar, and arranged with him to stage a big show for them at the Joliet High School for two nights, Wednesday and Thursday, November 3rd and 4th.

The show chosen is Victor Herbert's great Broadway success "The Only Girl", a very funny farce comedy with music, to be given with a company of fifty singers, dancers and comedians, mostly professionals.

The proceeds of this production will be used to defray the expenses of the Post's annual Christmas Party for the poor children of this section and other charity activities during the Holiday season.

Democrats To Hold Big Rally

James G. Meade of Joliet and James Barrowman of Joliet have been named as co-chairman of the arrangements committee for Will Co., for the State-wide Democratic Rally to be held at the State Fair Grounds in Springfield, October 21. These men represent the Will County Democratic Young Peoples group and the Democratic Veterans Organizations.

Arrangements are being made for this county to be represented at the rally by a large group, the chairman said this week.

Arrangements have been made to have the speaking program and the evening dance inside the coliseum at the State Fair Grounds. The cafeteria building, the coliseum and the barn to the west of the coliseum will be connected by covered passageways, so that in the event of inclement weather it will be possible to stay under cover at all times.

Tinley Couple To Be Married Sat.

Miss Evelyn Ceithamel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Ceithamel of Tinley Park and Earl LeGrand, now of Tinley Park, formerly of Matteson, will be united in marriage this coming Saturday afternoon in Sedan Prairie Lutheran church with Rev. Mr. Treskow officiating.

Miss Loretta Hick and Arthur Keuch will be the attendants. The newly weds will reside in the Johnson residence in the Elmore subdivision.

VIOLETS ARE BLOOMING

Here is something out of the ordinary: Mrs. Fred Rauch of Mokena reports that violets are blooming in her flower garden. This is rather unusual for October.

St. Peter's Evangelical Church At Frankfort To Observe Birthday

Named Director of Women's Chorus

Mr. Arthur Lambrecht of Frankfort has been chosen the Director of the Chicago Heights Women's chorus, a civic organization.

This organization is open to women of surrounding communities as well as Chicago Heights. They meet each Monday evening in the Old Bloom high school in Chicago Heights.

Mokena Postmistress At National Conv.

Miss Margaret Maue, the congenial postmistress of Mokena, is attending a national postmaster's convention now in session in San Francisco, California.

Former Dentist In Divorce Case

Thomas J. Ireland of Joliet, a dentist, charges his wife Elizabeth L. Ireland with desertion in a divorce bill filed in Circuit Court of Will county last week.

The couple was married in Chicago March 29, 1905. Mrs. Ireland is quite well known in Mokena where she conducted a dental parlor for a number of years in the present Pfleger store building.

Sam Kirby Dies Of Heart Ailment

Samuel H. Kirby, well known feed and grain dealer of Englewood died suddenly in his office in Chicago last Friday. He is survived by his widow Jennie, three sisters, Mrs. W. Shepard of Chicago; Mrs. David Lockwood of New Lenox and Miss Grace Kirby of Chicago and one brother, J. L. Kirby of Chicago.

Funeral services were held in the Lain chapel at 63rd and Harvard, Monday afternoon, under the auspices of the Englewood Commandery No. 59 of the Knights Templar. Interment was in Cedar Park cemetery.

Coming Events Column Feature

For sometime the various communities have found difficulty in sponsoring social affairs due to the conflicting dates. Many of them have planned certain affairs which would be on the same dates as planned by other clubs with a resultant mix-up.

In order to avoid this, The News-Bulletin offers to run a column to be entitled, "Coming Events" in which would appear the dates of various affairs thru out this territory. This has been suggested to us by a subscriber and we are glad to comply.

All we ask, is that all organizations take advantage of this column and send in the dates of their affairs. It is best to announce your date early.

SCHILLER NEW COMMANDER

At the recent election of officers of the Wm. Martin Post No. 725 of the VFW, Mr. Arthur Schiller of Lincoln Estates was elected Post Commander.

Elmer Gillett Dies In Cle Elum

Relatives and friends of Elmer Gillett of Cle Elum, Wash., were shocked to hear of his sudden death. Elmer was the son of Isaac M. Gillett Jr., formerly of Spencer, Ill. Elmer had been employed by the railroad company at Cle Elum for the past 37 years as depot agent.

He was an old school mate of the editor and the latter received a fine letter from him in July, upon the occasion of the editor's wife and daughter's stopping at Cle Elum on their way to Seattle, Washington.

It is with deep regret that we learn of the passing of our old chum of New Lenox school days, back in the nineties.

St. Mary's To Hold Card Party

The members of St. Mary's Catholic church of Mokena are busy completing final plans for their card and bunco party to be held in their parish hall on Wolf road, Friday evening October 22.

There will be many attractive prizes as well as a door prize.

Don't forget, the games are always followed by a delicious lunch served free of charge.

Tinley Legion To Hold Dance

The Tinley Park Legion Post No. 65 will sponsor an Armistice Day dance at the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park on Saturday night, November 13th. Good music. Everyone heartily invited.

Will Call For Upholstering Jobs

Fred Houston who recently opened an upholstery shop in the Boldt Building in Tinley Park, announces that he will call for and deliver upholstery jobs within a 15-mile radius of Tinley Park. Read his adv. in this issue for more information.

It's Coming Soon

"Your going to clap your hands, Your going to jump with joy", when you see in next week's paper, what will happen on November 19 in the Mokena public school auditorium. Watch for it.

Mokena M. E. S. S. To Present Plays

Finishing touches are being given to the plans and presentation of the three plays which the Mokena M. E. Sunday School will give on Friday evening October 29 at 8 o'clock in the Mokena public school auditorium.

The plays are entitled, "Little Prison"; "The Ring and The Look" and "Cleaning The Attie".

Mark your calendar for this date. Next week we will publish the cast of Characters.

Tinley Park Will Observe Gold Rush Period In "Days of 49" Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 16-17

The pioneer days and customs existing in the period of 1849 will be reenacted in a realistic manner in Tinley Park this coming Saturday and Sunday, October 16 and 17 when the Civic Club of Tinley Park sponsors an entertainment feature which will bring with it all the characteristics of those long by gone days. The covered wagon, the stage coach, the chuck wagon, old time gambling old time costumes, all will be seen in replica and an honest-to-goodness enjoyable time is promised to all who come.

The big affair will open Saturday evening with a free out door wild west show in front of the Saenger hall commencing at 8 p. m. Twenty horses and hard riding cow boys will be on hand. There will be a real old time round up party in the hall following the rodeo show. There will be dancing, entertainment and refreshments in typical western dance hall style. Be sure to see the folks from Red Gulch including such historical characters as Diamond Jim Brady Buffalo Bill, Wild Bill Hickcock, Diamond Lil, dance hall girls, etc.

There are to be two days of this event. Following Saturday's opening wild west show another big time is scheduled for Sunday afternoon when a big frontier parade will march thru the streets of Tinley.

The parade will start at 3 p. m. An extraordinary large crowd is expected to witness this out of the ordinary feature with costumes and regalia depicting "Out where the west begins."

All over town are pine board signs with the names and character of the business places crudely painted there on. For instance there are such mirth provoking signs like the one at the English Bros. garage reading "J. English, Ford Bronkoes." Here is another "E. Funk, gas. Not hear in 49." Even in those gold rush days there were tonsorial parlors, as witness this sign: "Barbershop, hair cuts, teeth pulled. Walter Mancke, prop." Now let's go to the Brueggemann elevator. Here we find "H. F. Brueggemann, bronkoe supplies." Tinley's leading department is advertised as "Hank Vogt's trading post. Lanterns, corsets, horse whips, chuck wagon supplies, herring, calico in season." Even the local police chief has a special adv. "Sheriff Steinhagen, known as Phil McCann."

The promoters of this unique entertainment feature have been spending many weeks in preparing for the big show. The local Beatty Lumber Yard has been the scene of much activity with in the last week or so. Some real old-time vehicles have been collected. There is a cab style buggy enclosed with shades on its windows, brass axles, rubber tires, donated by Hostert Bros. of Orland Park. This vehicle cost $1500 when new.

And now, the next thing we can say, is come over and take in the sights for yourself and look over the things we have described.

Tinley extends a hearty welcome to all those who come. The business men of this very enterprising community, are offering many special bargains for Friday and Saturday as per the advertisements in this issue.

For the first time in the history of the community, practically two full pages of advertising was used to bring the message of the business folk to the public.

GERMAN EDITOR DIES; PUBLISHED PAPER 42 YRS.

Richard Zintzsch, 72 years old, veteran printer and editor for 42 years of the "General-Anzeiger" only German script newspaper in Will County, and published in Joliet died Tuesday in St. Joseph's hospital in Joliet following a stroke of apoplexy suffered Sept. 30.

He came to Boston where he engaged in the publishing business. He came to Joliet 42 years ago and began the publication of the German weekly. He was widely known thru out the county and at one time his paper had a large circulation among the older German residents of the county.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon. Rev. J. A. Goeken, pastor of the First Lutheran church officiated. Burial was made in Oak wood cemetery.

Mokena Favors Ice Skating Rink As WPA Project

Monday evening a mass meeting was held in the Mokena school auditorium for the purpose of organizing a WPA recreational project.

Mr. Arthur Schoop gave a resume of what Mokena has done about it together with an explanation of the idea.

At several previous meetings, Mr. Joseph Madura of Steger, a WPA representative, explained the functions of this project. He showed that $90,000 has been allotted to Will county for recreational projects.

Thus far several eastern towns have taken up the recreational projects and at the Monday night meeting, the Mokena group decided that it would be advisable to take up a project under this recreational program if the local temporary committee can arrive at satisfactory agreement with Mr. Madura. The local people favor very much the building of an ice skating rink for this winter. The government in this case would provide trained persons to supervise this rink.

Whether this will prove realistic, will depend on the outcome of the meeting of the local committee and the WPA representative. Further details will be announced later.

"So we're off to be married! That's all right with me," Jerry Field approved fervently.

Brooke, whose face was pressed against the back window of the roadster, twisted round in her seat. "Don't be foolish, Jerry. Of course we're not. That was a red herring drawn across our trail."

"Just why the red herring?" The ironic note in his voice gave her a chill tremor of dismay; she didn't care for the way in which his eyes narrowed as they peered through the wind shield. She protested:

"Don't speak like that, it makes me shivery, and goodness knows my teeth are fairly chattering now." She turned to peer from the rear window. "No car in sight yet. Can you go a little faster?"

"Not without a risk of skidding off the causeway and breaking our necks. Can't you see how the snow is plastering the wind shield. The squeegee barely moves. Why the haste?"

"While I'm telling you I'll keep watch. The excitement began upon my return from the play."

She told him of leaving her town car in the garage, of stopping in the purple gloom under the hemlock to look at the lighted windows of the stone houses crouched on the ledge; her breath quickened as she repeated the words of the man who had produced the newspaper clipping:

"It's the picture of the dame who said: 'He was a swell-dressed fellow!' 'I'll have to date her up.'"

"That was what the Cassidy girl said about the man they suspect robbed Mrs. Hunt!"

Field's voice was sharp, his personal problem was submerged in a mounting tide of excitement. The car shot ahead like a whippet unleashed.

"I know that now. The certainty as to who he was flashed through my mind while I was driving, and the suspicion that he might be at the Other House tonight to lift—that's the technical term, isn't it—Mrs. Gregory's gorgeous diamonds."

"Why didn't you phone the police?"

"With Henri in the house? I may be a slow thinker but I'm not absolutely dumb."

"And the suitcase?"

"A touch of theater. I thought if one of the gang saw us starting, he might suspect he had been discovered, but if he heard what I told Taku he would feel secure. Elopements happen every day."

"Not in my young life," Jerry Field retorted crisply.

They maintained a breathless, alert silence until the roadster turned a corner into a street which had an air of lonely spaciousness. Just ahead bulked the combination jail and police headquarters, gloomy and ponderous.

"Shall I come in with you?" Field asked, as he stopped the roadster before a heavy iron door and cut off his engine.

"Yes, I may need you to corroborate my story. When I burst in upon them in this gown, they may think I'm crazy. Hurry! We don't know what is going on at the Other House."

Field slipped his arm within hers as they mounted the snowy steps. "I'll stick around and wait till you call me. Don't shiver, sweet thing. You're not afraid of the inspector, are you?"

"Afraid! No. Haven't I been cross-examined by him almost every day since what Sam calls 'our late unpleasantness'? It's just the Reyburn temperament."

Her satin sandals skidded treacherously in the corridor as she confronted a policeman whose nose, criss-crossed with a network of fine veins, had the effect of a red "stop" signal.

"Where's the inspector? I must see him. Matter of life and death," she confided breathlessly. In her excitement she caught the man's arm and shook it. He scowled at her, looked beyond her at Jerry Field; his expression mellowed.

"Inspector's just come in. He's in the radio division. Go through those swinging doors up them stairs to the tower."

Brooke was through the doors before the man had finished speaking. Three or four men leaning over a great U-shaped table looked up as she entered the room. With a muttered exclamation, the inspector left them and came forward.

A man sitting at a telephone said something in a low voice to an officer before a microphone. Tubes in the broadcasting apparatus crackled into life. He said slowly and distinctly into the mike:

"Calling car 3131. Car 3131. Car 3131. Go to K and Tenth street."

Brooke commanded breathlessly: "Listen to me, Inspector. The man who robbed Lola Hunt is serving supper at the Trent house on the point!"

Inspector Bill Harrison smiled, a curious smile.

"Wish I'd known this before, Miss Reyburn. I've just come from the point, following a tip I had. What's the dope on this bandit? Is it the same guy you saw at the Supper club?"

"It must be, Inspector. Tonight—" Before she had finished telling of the alleged waiter's remark about Maggie Cassidy's picture, machinery was crackling again and the man at the microphone was broadcasting distinctly:

"Calling car 1942. Car 1942. Car 1942. Go to Trent house on point. Inspector will meet you. Calling car 6784. Car 6784. Car 6784. Go to Trent house on point. Inspector will meet you."

Inspector Bill Harrison was out of the room before the man at the microphone had completed the call. One of the officers turned over two discs on the U-table; the other frowned at her with the bluest, most Irish eyes she ever had seen as he answered her unspoken question:

"We don't dare be more explicit over the mike, Miss. The thugs pick up the messages."

"I hope they get there in time, Sergeant?"

"Time for what, Miss?"

"I think—I think he's there to get Mrs. Gregory's diamonds—she's—she's simply plastered with them tonight."

Jerry Field was pacing the lower corridor when she reached it.

"It's about time you appeared, Brooke! I was just coming up to look for you. What do we do next?"

"Back to the party of course."

The wind whirled her short hair, clutched at her satin skirts, tugged at her velvet wrap as they went down the jail steps. As Jerry Field tucked the robe about her wet feet he looked up. Snow had settled in the brim of his soft hat, whitened his shoulders.

"Let's make a break for town, sweet thing, and make that yarn you told Taku the truth."

The expression in his eyes, the break in his voice hurt her. She said unsteadily:

"Please, Jerry! I can't care for you that way. Take me back quickly, will you? We mustn't miss Sam's party."

"Oh Sam! Sam is your white-haired boy. He's all that you Reyburn women think of or care about. I believe you'd sell your soul for him!"

After one look at his grim mouth and gloomy eyes, Brooke snuggled into her corner of the seat.

They sped in silence through the night. Toward the east the drab, heavy clouds were thinning before a spreading radiance.

"I believe the snow is letting up, Jerry. Look! The moon is trying to break through! Drive faster. I can't wait to know what has happened."

"Don't worry, you'll get to the party all right."

Brooke ignored his gruffness. "Of course I want to get to the party. Then I shan't feel guilty that I dragged you away from the fun and congratulations. Leave me at Look-out House. I must change these soaked sandals before I join the festivities. Here we are."

From the top of the steps she looked down at Field who was looking up at her.

"I'm sorry, Jerry," she whispered softly, before she entered the house and closed the door behind her.

"He doesn't really love me, he's a spoiled boy who wants what he can't have," she reassured herself, as in her boudoir she changed her wet sandals.

She readjusted the rhinestone and emerald clip on her white frock, sprayed perfume on her hair, powdered her nose, accented her lips. She shook her head at the looking-glass girl.

"Stalling, aren't you, Brooke Reyburn? You dread to face Mark Trent with that will you've kept back for two days, don't you? Get going!"

She crossed to the desk, found the key where she had hidden it.

"Zero hour," she said aloud, and unlocked the drawer in which she had placed the will.

She looked down. The drawer was empty.

CHAPTER XIV

People coming, but not going; music never stopping. It was that kind of a party.

To the accompaniment of the hum of voices, the stimulating beat and throb of the orchestra, the distant faint tinkle of silver and glass.

Sam Reyburn made slow progress through the gay, colorful crowd on the lower floor of the Other House, grinning at girls in lovely evening frocks who cooed over him; frowning at men who tried to detain him.

From where he stood on the lowest step of the circular stairway, Mark Trent watched him. "All this praise is heady stuff for a boy," he thought, and then reminded himself that Sam wasn't a boy. Why wasn't Brooke with him to share the honors? She had been the first to leave the hall, the man in charge of the parked cars had told him. Where was Jerry Field? He hadn't appeared either.

A curious premonition turned him cold. Of course Brooke hadn't meant it when in answer to his sarcastic suggestion she had said she would end Field's torment. Hadn't she? There had been infinite determination in her crisp retort:

"I will. Tonight."

"Seen Brooke, Mark?" Sam Reyburn inquired as he approached. "I want her to be the first to know that I'm to get a contract; that I have an option in my pocket and a check."

Mark Trent laid his hand affectionately on his shoulder.

"Great stuff, Sam, great stuff. I was sure that the New York producer was hooked when he spoke to me."

Sam grinned. "Offered you the lead in a Broadway production, didn't he? He's a publicity hound. Think of the headlines:

"Leading Insurance Executive Leaves Lucrative Business for the Stage." Will you do it?"

"What do you think? How's the party going, Mrs. Gregory?"

Mark Trent smiled at the woman whose blazing tiara on her marcelled white hair, and plastron of diamonds on her purple velvet gown dimmed what sparkle life had left in her tired eyes. She answered crisply:

"Listen to the hubbub and you won't ask the question. Your party has brought out tails and white ties, Mark, that's a triumph in itself. I always know what guests think of my parties by the way they dress for them." She patted Sam's sleeve.

"My boy, your play is the sweetest, loveliest, most heart-wringing thing I've seen on the stage for years. Where's your sister? I want to tell her what I think of it."

"That's what Mark and I were wondering. She left the hall before the rest of us; she told me before the first curtain was rung up that she would dash home to change for the party."

Mrs. Gregory's face grew a shade less colorful. "I don't like her not being here, I don't like it. I've been uneasy about that girl every moment since she testified at the inquest about the strange man who passed through her room the night of the filling station hold-up. The man hasn't been caught. She knows too much. They may try to put her out of the way."

The strong lenses in Sam's horn-rimmed spectacles magnified the horror in his eyes.

"What an awful suggestion, Mrs. Gregory! What a gosh—awful thought!"

It was an awful thought, but improbable, most improbable. Mark Trent assured himself. With difficulty he cleared his voice of hoarseness before he accused:

"You've been reading mystery stories, Empress, confess now, haven't you? Just the same, we'll start on Brooke's trail at once. What is it, Kowa?"

He spoke sharply to the servant who had wormed his way through the crowd of dancers who overflowed from the library to the hall.

"Much obliged. Madame Gregory's car here. Chauffeur says to tell her storm bad, very bad. She better get home. He knows she not like to be out in storm."

"Tell him to wait. I won't go till I know where Brooke is," Mrs. Gregory snapped.

"Did you see Miss Reyburn come in, Kowa?" Mark Trent inquired. Of course, the suggestion that she was in danger was absurd, but it was getting under his skin.

The Jap's slanting eyes narrowed to mere slits. He put his lips close to Mark Trent's ear and whispered:

"Miss Reyburn tell Taku she and Mr. Field go to marry, thank you. She carry suitcase, sir."

"What!"

Had he shouted the word? Mark's eyes flashed from Mrs. Gregory to Sam Reyburn. Both were regarding him anxiously, but apparently neither had caught the content of Kowa's whisper.

"Has anything happened to Brooke?" Mrs. Gregory's lips twitched, tears filled her eyes. Sam caught Trent's arm.

"What did Kowa say? What did he say?"

Mark Trent steadied his mind. He must reply to their questions. What should he say? He couldn't blurt out the truth here. Perhaps Brooke had flung that remark at Taku for dramatic effect. But the suitcase—

"Mark! Mark! Why don't you answer?"

He looked down into Mrs. Gregory's eyes, terrified now.

"Brooke is perfectly safe. She—There's Field! Ask him where she is. He saw her last. Go get him. Sam! Go get him!"

"No need, he's coming as fast as he can push through the dancers, and Jed Stewart is at his heels. They are white as sheets. What's all the mystery? The air is full of it. My skin's turning to gooseflesh. For Pete's sake, where's Brooke, Jerry?"

CHRISTIAN SPEECH AND CONDUCT

LESSON TEXT—James, Chapter 3.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth.—Ephesians 4:29.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Words I Say.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Bridge on the Tongue.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christian Speech.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christian Words and Works.

Christian speech and conduct may well be studied in the book of James, for he stresses the importance of works as demonstrating faith. There are two common errors—one is to attempt to be justified by good works apart from faith in the Lord Jesus Christ—the other is to talk about believing in him and then fail to live in accordance with one's profession. Some have assumed that James fell into the former error, urging works as a substitute for faith, but an intelligent reading of his epistle clearly indicates that he is in no sense contradicting the Scripture doctrine of justification by faith, but is showing that professed faith which does not result in Christian living is in reality a dead and useless thing.

I. Christian Talk (vv. 1-12).

As he enters upon his searching and convicting discussion of the tongue and its misuse the writer distinguishes between

1. Two kinds of talkers (vv. 1, 2).
a. "Teachers" (v. 1.) who have a peculiar responsibility because they stand as the representatives of God at the sacred desk. It is not a place to be sought after, and the man who fills it at God's call needs divine grace and direction that he may speak the truth.

b. "We all" (v. 2). The speech of every one of us counts either for or against God, even though we may not fill the teacher's chair or stand in the pulpit.

2. A single danger (vv. 3-12). All of us have the one danger—lack of "tongue-control." Developing that thought the text first points out that

a. Powerful things need control (vv. 3-5). The horse is a wild and useless animal without the directing and restraining bit. A ship without a rudder will be lost. A tongue needs direction and control, for while a little thing, it is tremendously powerful.

b. An uncontrolled tongue is dangerous (vv. 6-8). How vivid is the imagery of the words before us. A fire spreading and destroying, an untamed animal running wild in all its fury, a deadly poison eating away the life—such is the uncontrolled tongue.

We recognize the truth of these things. We see how vile and careless speech debases man, how words chosen for their power to destroy pour forth from the press, over the footlights, from man to man and literally "set on fire the course of nature" (v. 6).

c. An uncontrolled tongue is inconsistent (vv. 9-12). Again the figure is striking. The fountain which pours forth fresh pure water to sustain life does not at the same time bring forth the bitter brackish water. Fig trees do not bear olives, vines do not bear figs. Nature is consistent and dependable.

But the tongue—ah, that is another matter! How sadly do we confess our failure, for here do we "offend all" (v. 2). We bless God, and defile and destroy man, with the same lips. "These things ought not so to be" (v. 10).

II. Christian Walk (vv. 13-18).

The word "conversation" in v. 13 is an English word which now means "talk" but which formerly meant "manner of living."

1. Words and works must agree (vv. 13, 14). It is only right that those who speak of following Christ should prove it in their manner of living. Talk may be smooth and broad in its claims, but the demonstration of its reality and honesty is in the daily walk. This calls for wisdom which is divine—earthly wisdom will not suffice.

2. Earthly wisdom is false (vv. 15, 16). There is a wisdom apart from God. Men of the world are brilliant and able, but scrutinize their wisdom and you will find that it is "sensual"—that is, of the senses—or natural as distinguished from spiritual. All too often it is downright "devilish" (v. 16).

3. True wisdom is from above (vv. 17, 18). Undeified, unselfish, unpromising, but not quarrelsome or stubborn, impartial and sincere—and "full of mercy and good fruits"—such is God's wisdom for the Christian's life.

Strength Unto Strength

The strength of a man consists in finding out the way in which God is going, and going in that way too.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Physical and Spiritual Growth

We develop physically by acquiring for ourselves; but spiritually we develop by giving to others.—Rutledge.

Opportunities

A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds.—Bacon.

Trim Ways to Greet Fall

WHEN the haze hangs in the horizon and you want to step right out and tell the world it's grand to be alive—that's when you want simple dresses like these to wear. Under a coat or without a coat—they're tops. Sew-Your-Own approves this fashion for simple things and helps you to make them for your own wardrobe with the aid of the three patterns shown here. Full instructions included.

Coat Dress for Large Women.

The woman with a real figure problem likes the ease and trim lines of this Princess coat dress, made to wear as casually as a coat. The dress buttons like a coat and takes inches off the silhouette. It's designed on flattering semi-fitted lines and is correctly made in silk or wool fabrics. For morning wear, this is a frock smartly made in sturdy cotton.

Slim Waistline in Misses' Frock.

If you wear a 12 to 20 size, then you'll want this very becoming dress made with lifted waistline to give you a molded figure-line. Square shouldered and trimly finished with two pockets, this dress will see you through every daytime occasion and is smartly made in any fabric you prefer—silk, velveteen or thin wool.

Woman's Shirtwaist Dress.

This fashion—good year in and year out—is one which you will want in your wardrobe in a heavy silk or in a sturdy cotton. Make it yourself and have a dress that you can wear at every hour of the day. Note the raglan sleeves extending from the yoke of the dress, a detail that assures you complete comfort and free movement.

Pattern 1983 is designed for sizes 36 to 50. Size 38 requires 3 3/4 yards of 54-inch material, plus 1/2 yard 39-inch fabric to contrast.

Pattern 1379 is designed for sizes 12 to 20. Size 14 requires 2 1/2 yards of 54-inch material.

Pattern 1225 is designed for sizes 34 to 44. Size 36 requires 3 3/4 yards of 39-inch material, plus 1/2 yard of contrasting.

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.
When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness,
getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste.

WHY LIMIT THE LENGTH OF RAILROAD TRAINS BY LAW.

There has been much comment throughout the country on a bill which is now in Congress, as to its advisability of becoming a law.

This bill known as S. 69, is a bill to limit the length of freight trains arbitrarily to 70 cars, has passed the Senate of the United States and is now pending in the House of Representatives where it will be considered at the next session.

This bill is pressed by the unions of railroad men in train service as a safety measure. Actually it is a bill to make more jobs by making railroads run more trains than are necessary—at an annual cost to the railroads and the public of more than one hundred million dollars.

A three-judge United States Court which considered all the facts about a similar law passed in the State of Nevada said, "When more train units are run than are necessary to handle a given amount of traffic the hazard of accident in handling such traffic is correspondingly increased."

From a 'careful review of the evidence' the court came to the conclusion

"That from the standpoint of safety to the public to travelers on railroads; and to railroad employees, the Nevada Train Limit Law bears no reasonable relation to safety but if enforced would impair and lessen the safety... of freight train operation in Nevada."

That this is true is shown by the record of railroad safety and service for many years past. As railroads have laid better tracks, cut down grades, straightened curves, built stronger bridges, developed more powerful locomotives and better equipment of all sorts, they have progressively increased the length of trains.

Actually, the measure would not contribute to safety but instead it would involve more risks by running more trains, thus raising operating costs, which would have to be passed on to the public by increased freight and passenger rates. More trains would mean more trains at the grade crossing naturally that would increase the hazards at that point.

The railroads have led in the safety campaigns, so it is now safer to travel on a train than stay home.

For the benefit of a small minority, the whole public would be indirectly taxed and one of its most important utilities would have a large burden added to those it already staggers under.

Deadline For 1937 Farm Plan Is Set For October 31

Will county farmers be reminded by Farm Adviser L. W. Braham that any performance in connection with the 1937 agricultural conservation program must be completed by November 1st if payments are to be earned.

The 1937 agricultural conservation program year extends from November 1, 1936 to October 31, 1937.
Mr. Braham explained in calling attention to the deadline date.

Any limestone to be spread for payment must actually be spread on the ground by the closing date Mr.
Braham warned. Any fall seeding of

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, Representative for this district at Springfield, attended the chicken supper at St. John church last Friday evening and with her companion, Mrs. Carlson of Lockport, spent the balance of the evening in the Wm. Semmler home.

Mrs. Wm. Lowe suffered painful injuries to her left hand one day last week when it was caught in the rollers of the electric washing machine.

Mrs. Hugo Stamer and daughter of Chicago spent the week end with her daughter, Mrs. Adolph Steen and family.

Mildred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Cooper underwent an operation in Silver Cross hospital last week.

The Frank Clevenger family have moved from the Krapp flat to the Walter Spiess house on Front street.
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Erdman have rented the house now occupied by the Rabinov family. The latter are building a beautiful home nearby.

The 8th grade pupils have made some very good maps showing the geographical divisions of the United States and their products.

The 6th grade history class made some excellent drawings of Phoenician ships. The pupils are enjoying the study of the Current Events magazine immensely—an unusual amount of interest has been shown.

has returned to the Chicago school.
This room will have charge of the assembly program Thursday October 21 and all parents and friends are welcome. The pupils of this room have enjoyed making Fruit-men posters. These are now on display.
Pupils are busy this week having their six week's tests.

Administrative Comment

The eighth period on Friday September 24 was devoted to a clean-up drive. The pupils in all the rooms cleaned out their desks and took all articles not used in school, home. During the latter half of the period the boys helped Mr.
Dunn clean up the school yard by removing all sticks, small stones and paper. The girls helped the teachers in the various rooms re-arrange the books and other articles in the cupboards and bookcases. At the end of the period Mr. Dunn inspected each room and found everything in very good order.

There was only one case of tardiness the first month of school. This is a very good record and we hope to eliminate all tardiness before the end of the year.

legumes and grasses will need to show, as of the closing date, a stand which will be expected to go thru the winter. Any plowing under of soybeans must also be completed before November 1 to earn payments.

Final inspection of cooperating farms in Will county will be made as of November 1. The actual work of making final check of farms will be under way prior to November 1 in order that applications may be offered to farmers at the earliest possible date. Even though inspection is made prior to November 1, it will be made as of that date.

No farm will be inspected or be eligible for payment unless a request for inspection and measurement has been received at the office of the Will county agricultural conservation Association by November 1st.

"FATHER" WENT TO PTA

Fathers were the special guests of the Parent-Teacher Association at its regular meeting on October 8th.

The high spot of the evening was a play entitled "Father Goes To P. T. A." ably directed by Mrs. John Swisher. Father, played by Mrs. Walter Johnson, said "No" emphatically that he would not attend the meeting. But after mother, played by Mrs. Moss, served him fried chicken for dinner from a table decorated with flowers and after the children, Mrs. Irvin Stover, Mrs. Boyd Carr, and Mrs. Chas. Crist, besieged him for help with their home work, he reluctantly escorted his wife to the school. Of course he found the program both enjoyable and helpful. The cast also included Mrs. Wellman, the comic negro cook and Janet Rogers and Shirely Mason whose dancing delighted everyone.

The characters were well chosen and played their parts well. Mrs. Harry Trevarthen of the Parent Education and Home Making Committee announced her committee would hold a meeting at one o'clock, November 5th just preceding the regular meeting of the Association.

Twelve members attended the district meeting at Dolton on Wednesday and brought back with them many plans and a new zeal for the work.

IN MEMORIAM

ETHEL AND ART PATNO — In dear memory of our dear children who passed away, October 14, 1934. The sun and moon are shining, On two lone and silent graves, Beneath lie the ones we dearly love, But whom we could not save; Friends may think we have forgotten When at times they see us smile, Little do they know the heartaches That our smile hides all the while.

MAMA AND DAD
MR. AND MRS. E. RICE

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to sincerely thank all the relatives, friends and neighbors for sympathy and kindness shown us during our bereavement. We thank Rev. Meyer for his kind and admonishing message; Mrs. Meyer for her beautiful vocal selection, for the beautiful floral offerings and also those who so kindly donated the use of their cars.

And may the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God our Father and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit abide with us all.
MRS. ARTHUR STEHL AND CHILDREN.

EXTRA! ATTENTION!

The Sunshine 4-H Club has plans well under way for their annual fall play and this year's play promises to be the best one so far.

If you have not seen one of our plays, be sure to attend this one. We are not sure of the date as yet. It will be announced in the near future.

The girls are also going to have their "Achievement Program" and a "Style Show."

Watch this newspaper for further particulars.

The Tinley Park Royal Neighbor Camp held their regular meeting on Tuesday evening with about 45 present. Lunch was served and bunco played. Mrs. Wm. Stockman was the winner of the monthly award.

Miss Marianne Moss spent Saturday and Sunday at home with her parents, returning Sunday evening to the St. Luke hospital, Chicago, where she is in training. Marianne's many friends wish her success in her undertaking. She is in a class of 69 entering October first.

A committee of Firemen, consisting of Chief Fred Hick, E. A. Moss, Edw. Henke, Henry Hase and Wm. Rick went to Danville the past week to look at new fire trucks, etc. Good luck boys.

The Ladies Aid of the German M. E. church met for their regular monthly meeting Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Emil Bettenhausen. Most of the members were present. The Aid has had the parsonage painted and partly renovated recently. Plans are under way for a chicken supper in the near future. Watch this paper for announcement of time and place. We are also selling Christmas cards and subscriptions for McCall's magazine.

A WORD to the Modern Parent...

PROTECT YOUR CHILDREN'S EYES!

What Jimmy and Sally will accomplish in school this year depends on their eyes.

If there are serious defects in their vision, by all means see an eye specialist.

But beyond this first precaution, the first duty of the modern parent is to provide proper lighting facilities in those places in the home where children study, read, work or play.

Since educators tell us that 87 per cent of all sense impressions come through the eyes, proper lighting is especially needed at the desk or table where school work is to be done at home.

Check up on the lamps that your children will use. The correct lamp should be high enough that it gives good light over a wide area. It should be so shaded that the bright light will not shine directly into the eyes.

If the child sits in an armchair to read, there should be a lamp beside the chair.

An excellent lamp for reading or studying is the approved I.E.S. type which can light both upwards and downwards. Light thrown down is softened by a diffusing bowl that also reflects light upward for general illumination. Such illumination eases eye muscles. Without it, the eyes must constantly adjust themselves to areas of brightness and darkness, causing strain and fatigue.

These efficient, attractive lamps are on display in many types and sizes at your Public Service store and neighborhood dealers—and at remarkably low prices. See them today!

THOMSON'S TOP YIELD
PFISTER HYBRID
SEED CORNFOR YOUR 1938 SEED CORN REQUIREMENTS.

Visit the Thomson Hybrid fields on Lincoln Highway and observe how the long ear, with free withdrawing husks, best meets the ear worm situation and avoids much of its damage. Thomson's Top-Yield Hybrid is adapted to our soil and climate and will make best seedling headway in cool spring weather. Stalks resist lodging and it will be an old time pleasure to husk with the greatest abundance of sound corn for your year's effort. See these fields before husking (now starting) is completed in Frankfort Township, Lincoln Highway one-half mile west of U. S. 45.

Reduce Corn Ear
Worm Damage

Corn ear worm damage is increasing yearly in Illinois resulting in destruction of near five per cent of the crop. The ear worm is the larval development of Miller moths that deposit the larval egg under the husks, usually in the soft silk mat within the husks at the tip of the ear. Some moths now insert their ova-depositors thru the side of the husks near the base of the ear as distinguished from ear tips, but the large majority deposit the egg in the silk at the tips. The larva often feed on the silks as well as kernels making a sticky mass which causes a delay in husking.

Until recently the general concept of an ideal ear and husk setting was an ear that had kernels on the cob completely to the cob tip and well covered with extending husks. This ear type was short, hence easily covered. The theory of this was that the ear was maturing the tip pointed downward with extending husks which shed rainfall and thus would protect the ear from weather damage and rot. When this concept was circulated ear worm damage was less extensive than now.

It is easy to see, however, that extending husks with silks within form a most favorable incubating chamber for the ear worm egg and larva and protecting the larva from its predatory enemies, particularly the birds and spiders. Where we have the downward pointing ear with a long cob, regardless of ear kernel setting, and husks that are shorter than ear length that open a pathway toward maturity with protrusion and exposure of the ear end, birds and other predatory enemies remove and devour the ear worm usually before it accomplishes excessive damage to the ear. An odd feature of this picking out of the worm by birds is that the bird almost always takes a kernel or 2 sometimes more, of corn which we can regard as its toll but it would seem the two together appeals to the bird's appetite.

Many of us on husking have noted the greater damage accomplished by ear worms under the protection of extending husks; often times making the separation of the husks difficult because of the matting up caused by the worm feeding on the silks and its distribution of excreta. This slows down husking. The corn husker's ideal ear is one extending downward at husking time with a free short husk out of which the dry ear protrudes and from which the ear worm has been removed by the birds before ear damage could occur. The ear too, has a better opportunity of drying. This feature has been one of the aims sought and attained in the development of Hybrid 366 with its graceful goose neck shank, husks free and withdrawn from the long protruding ear with its minimum of ear worm damage.

Farmers in this vicinity can get a demonstration of how this particular 366 Hybrid best avoids ear worm damage and can be seen by a hurry up visit to Thomson's Top-Yield Pfister Hybrid Fields in Frankfort Township on the Lincoln Highway.

RE: UNION DRAINAGE DISTRICT NO. 1, OF THE TOWNS OF RICH, COOK COUNTY, AND FRANKFORT, WILL COUNTY, STATE OF ILLINOIS.

BREVITIES

William E. Johnston, past potentate of Mohammed temple, Shrine, prominent Rotarian and auto dealer, died in Peoria.

William Nelson, forty-three years old, grandson of John Nelson, founder of the Rockford knitting industry, died. He was in the insurance field for many years.

The state aid roads of Tazewell county are in splendid condition, members of the board of supervisors learned on a bus tour of the county.

A forty year record for early corn husking in Dewitt county was established when two mechanical pickers harvested 1,500 bushels for Fred Jackson of Weldon.

The Tazewell county corn-husking contest will be held Thursday, October 14, the county central committee of the farm bureau has decided.

John F. Jungles, forty-six years old, Aurora, a World war veteran, was killed when he was struck by a Chicago, Aurora and Elgin electric train as he walked on the tracks near the Aurora city limits.

Andrew Mazlo, forty-three years old, known as a radical agitator, was found hanged from a tree in Washington park, Waukegan. He had ended his own life, according to Chief of Police William Blaylock.

Members of the Wabash county board of commissioners increased the blind pension from $10 to $15 a month. There are forty blind pensioners in the county. Commissioners said available funds made the increase possible.

David Webb, Waukegan civic and business leader, died in his home after being stricken by a heart attack while playing golf. He was sixty-nine years old. He was the son of Chase Edgar Webb, a pioneer Lake county resident.

The United States bureau of public roads has notified state officials that $2,644,980 in federal funds is available at once for Illinois' 1938 federal aid grade-crossing program. Fourteen grade separation projects are planned for eleven counties.

The Warner Construction company of Chicago was announced by Capt. S. N. Karrick, acting district engineer for the war department, as the low bidder for construction of a dam in the Illinois river five miles below Peoria. Its bid was $606,646.

Gov. Henry Horner issued a proclamation designating the week beginning October 10 as Parent-Teacher week and asked schools, churches and civic and patriotic organizations to devote time to study of the national program.

Albert Carter Lamb, seventeen-year-old chore boy, has begun a life term in the prison in Chester for the skillet-slaying of Mrs. Mary Wright Flannery, eighty-two years old, East St. Louis widow, last April 21. He pleaded guilty.

The Jefferson county board of supervisors voted to rebuild the county farm at a cost of between $7,000 and $8,000, on a 160-acre plot, but will sponsor no farming on the acreage. Most of the farm will be rented out. The old county farm burned several months ago.

Dorian Wilkinson, star basketball center at Michigan State college for the last three years, was named head basketball coach at St. Viator college, Kankakee, succeeding John McNamara of De Kalb, who resigned recently to become a member of the University of Detroit faculty.

Experts from the Agriculture department in Washington said Illinois appeared certain to maintain its position as the leading soy bean producing state when this year's crop is harvested. They estimated the Illinois crop would provide 22,718,000 bushels of the nation's estimated total production of 36,061,000.

All officers of the Illinois Telephone association were re-elected to one-year terms at the annual convention in Peoria. They are C. R. Brown, Springfield, president; H. A. Joslyn, Sycamore, vice-president; A. J. Parsons, Springfield, secretary-treasurer, and Ben V. Boynton, Springfield, general counsel.

Olmstead and Mounds have lost in their efforts to displace Mound City as the seat of Pulaski county. Petitions of the two cities were dismissed by County Judge Loren H. Boyd with the announcement with-drawals and duplications left an insufficient number of names to meet provisions of the state law governing removal of county seats.

Arthur E. Rodman, eighteen years old, of Carterville, was found dead and George Richards, also eighteen, of Marion, was found severely injured in the wreckage of their auto beside a spur track of the St. Paul railroad in Glenwood. Apparently the two youths, enrolled in the CCC camp at Thornton, drove the car into a passing freight train.

Illinois voters will be allowed to shift from one political party to another at the primary elections of April 12, 1937, it was agreed by election judges at the quarterly meeting of the Association of Election Commissioners of Illinois in Chicago.

Edward Bresan of Bethany missed some of his fine 200-pound hogs and investigated. He found them, after digging up three-quarters of a mile of large tile, which had an opening in his barnlot. The hogs, once they had fallen into the drain, were so fat they couldn't turn around and had kept going.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN THE GREEN FOREST

WHEN the little people of the Green Forest become excited they become very much excited. Yes, sir, they become so excited that everybody talks at once, just like some other people. And now there was great excitement in the Green Forest. Indeed, Peter Rabbit couldn't remember a time when there had been so much excitement, not even the time when it was discovered that Prickly Porky the Porcupine had come down to the Green Forest to live. And it was all because of a big black stranger, big as Farmer Brown's boy and black as Blacky the Crow, and whose name was Buster Bear.

Sammy Jay had been the first to see him. Blacky the Crow had been the next. Then Unc' Billy Possum, Jimmy Skunk, and Peter Rabbit. At least so far as any one knew they were the first to see him. As a matter of fact, Paddy the Beaver cuse ready when he is likely to have to make good one of his boasts. It was so this time. No sooner had Prickly Porky proposed that he hunt up Buster Bear than Reddy remembered that he had a very important errand to do way down on the Green Meadows. He was sorry, but it really had to be done. Perhaps Jumper the Hare would go in his place. Reddy grinned wickedly when he said this, for everybody knows that Jumper the Hare is very, very timid. So just try to imagine how surprised and excited everybody was when Jumper said: "Certainly I'll go and give the invitation to Buster Bear. I'll be delighted to."

At first everybody but Prickly Porky stared at Jumper as if they thought that he was joking, and they couldn't quite see the joke. Then as they began to realize that he meant just what he said, they looked at each other again, as if they thought him crazy. But Jumper appeared not to notice it, and started for the deepest part of the Green Forest to look for Buster Bear. Reddy Fox started off, too, but he went in the direction of the Green Meadows. He didn't want to go, but he had to because he had said he had an important errand there. As soon as he was out of sight he made a wide circle back to the Green Forest, and then he tried to get ahead of Jumper the Hare where he could hide and give Jumper a terrible fright. It wouldn't do to let the other little people think that Jumper the Hare dared do something that he didn't dare do.

had seen him before Sammy Jay did, but Paddy is one who does not tell all he sees, as does Sammy Jay, and so he had said nothing.

But with Sammy Jay and Peter Rabbit to spread the news it was not long before everybody knew all there was to know about it and nothing else was talked about or thought about. Of course, the news soon spread all over the Green Meadows and to the Smiling Pool and it made almost as much excitement there as in the Green Forest. Of course, Peter Rabbit had told every one he met of how he had seen Jimmy Skunk make Buster Bear get out of his way, and of course almost everybody had a great deal of admiration for Jimmy Skunk. The only one who didn't was Prickly Porky.

"Pooh!" said Prickly Porky. "That was nothing. I could do the same thing. I'm no more afraid of Buster Bear than Jimmy Skunk is. The fact is, I know Buster Bear very well, for he comes from the Great Woods from which I came. There is nothing to be afraid of in Buster Bear."

Of course, every one thought that Prickly Porky was just boasting, and that he was jealous of Jimmy Skunk. Reddy Fox said as much.

"All right, Reddy! You go hunt up Buster Bear and invite him to come here, and I'll show you whether or not I am afraid of him."

Now, Reddy had boasted that he wasn't afraid of Buster Bear. You know he is a great boaster, and likes to pretend that he isn't afraid of anybody or anything. But, like most boasters, he always has an ex-be used. There is no satisfaction in this, of course, for a radiator is intended to supply heat.

A radiator delivers heat in two ways; heat is radiated from the hot metal just as it is from a fire or the sun, and heat passes to the room through the upward flow of air that is heated between the radiator sections. An enclosure with a solid front prevents the radiation of heat from the metal. A cover over the top of the radiator prevents the free upward flow of heated air. Even the best of radiator enclosures check the heating effect to some extent, but a checking of nearly one-half is entirely too great to be considered.

RADIATOR COVERS

NOT long ago I saw some tests made on a new type of radiator enclosures. The results showed that these enclosures cut down the heat thrown off by a radiator by nearly one-half. The enclosures were ornamental; they were better looking than the radiators. But cutting down the heat by one-half means the chilling of a room in which they might

GOOD NUTRITION IS UP TO COOK

Food Must Be Varied and Include Needed Calories.

By EDITH M. BARBER

GOOD nutrition depends upon more than food selection. First of all there is, of course, the choice of such a variety of foods that together they add to the perfect sum of calories, muscle building, energy giving, vitamin and mineral-bearing foods.

While some of these foods may be eaten in their raw form and need merely the process of digestion to be absorbed, others need to be prepared for digestion by cookery. Meat, for instance, must be cooked, because the human teeth are not strong enough to divide raw meat into small pieces which may be easily reached by the digestive juices.

Cereals also need preparation, either by long cooking, by grinding or by pressing by machinery, plus a short cooking. The ready-to-eat cereals are examples of the latter treatment. Flour is also prepared by machinery at the mills before it is made into bread, cakes and cookies.

While many vegetables and fruits can be eaten in their natural form, some of them need cooking for two reasons. The first is, of course, to make them ready for digestion; the other to make them palatable. Potatoes are the outstanding example of the latter fact. The raw potato is unsuited in its raw form to take an important place in our diet.

Fruit Au Gratin.

12 canned or stewed pear or peach halves

Cornflake crumbs

Butter

Drain the fruit, saving the juice. Roll fruit in crumbs. Place in buttered baking dish, cut side up. Dot with butter. Bake in hot oven (400 to 425 degrees Fahrenheit) until crumbs are brown. Serve with lemon sauce.

Chocolate Filling.

4 ounces chocolate, cut in pieces

1 1/4 cups milk

1/4 cup flour

1 cup sugar

2 tablespoons butter

1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla

Put chocolate and milk in double boiler and heat. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until smooth. Sift flour with sugar, add a small amount of the chocolate mixture and stir until smooth. Return to double boiler, cook until thick and add butter and vanilla. This filling may be stored in refrigerator in a covered jar. It may be used in the pudding, or to put between layers of cake or as a pie filling.

Potatoes Hashed in Cream.

2 tablespoons butter

2 cups diced potatoes

Salt, pepper

2 cups rich milk

Melt the butter, add potatoes and seasoning and stir over fire until the butter is absorbed. Add the milk and cook slowly, about half an hour. Add more milk if needed.

Baked Stuffed Fish.

1 medium sized fish, two to three pounds

Stuffing

2 cups soft bread crumbs

2 teaspoons chopped onion

Salt, pepper

2 teaspoons lemon juice

3 tablespoons melted fat

Clean the fish by removing the scales and the fins, and split. Stuff and sew. Dredge with flour, dot with butter and bake in a hot oven (500 degrees Fahrenheit). Cook until the fish separates from the bone and flakes when tested with the point of a knife.

Potato Salad.

4 cups cold boiled potatoes

1 chopped onion

1 cucumber or 2 pickles

1/4 cup French dressing

Cooked salad dressing

Cut potatoes into dice or slices, add the onion and sliced cucumber or pickles, mix with French dressing which should be very well seasoned, and let stand in ice box one or two hours. Mix with salad dressing, serve on lettuce and garnish with parsley. Celery, cut into cubes, or celery seed may be used with the other ingredients if desired.

Plum Jam.

1 pound plums

1/2 to 3/4 pound sugar

Wash plums and remove seeds. Add sugar and cook until mixture is thick and clear. Pack immediately into hot, clean jars and seal at once.

Salmon Cutlets.

2 cups flaked salmon

1 cup thick white sauce

1 teaspoon chopped parsley

Paprika

1 teaspoon lemon juice

Salt

Mix in the order given, spread on a platter to cool. When cold, shape like a cutlet and fry in deep fat, 375 degrees F. A stick of macaroni may be inserted in the end to represent the bone.

For the greatest heating effect, the front of an enclosure should be an open grill that will not check the radiation of heat from the metal. Not long ago I saw a home-made enclosure; a wood frame with the front filled in with diamond metal lath. This interfered very little with the radiation of heat, and, painted with the rest of the enclosure, was very attractive in appearance.

For a full flow of heated air, the top of an enclosure should be open, or at least be of open grill-work. The alternative is to have a solid top, as much higher than the radiator as the radiator is deep, and with its front open. Heated air will then have room enough to pass out horizontally. The lower part of an enclosure should be open, so that there can be a full flow of cool air from the floor.

An enclosure should not be bought for its looks alone. First consideration should be given to the extent to which it may cut down the heating effect of the radiator.

FEMININE shoestring problems are nothing to masculine shoestring problems, we hear. It's probably because the men have more shoestrings to handle. Anyhow, we've learned on good authority that most men's shoestrings get into hard knots sooner or later. And it is rumored that wives find it difficult to quiet the frustrated untiers of knots.

Well, here is our advice to wives of men whose shoestrings won't untie.

First have some scissors handy. Keep your eye on the man who is grappling with the knot. Don't step in too soon for he must be given a chance to feel his independence. When he gets to the point where he gives the shoestring one tremendous yank and then glowers at it, hand him the shears without a word. You know then that he is mad enough to ruin a pair of shoestrings willingly. Everything will be fine after that.

Be on Hand With the Scissors When He Gets Tied Up In Knots.

But perhaps you'd better have an extra pair of shoestrings tucked away in your sewing basket in case his destructive tendencies have worn off by the next morning.

Tea Towels Done In Cross Stitch

Better than a picnic is the fun you'll have embroidering tea towels with these gay and gay motifs—luscious cross stitched fruits and homey everyday kitchenware. Do the dishes in outline stitch or applique as you choose. In No. 5891 you will find a transfer pattern of six motifs averaging 5 1/4 by 6 1/2 inches; material requirements; color suggestions; illustrations of all stitches used.

To obtain this pattern send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y.

A MISTAKE TO WAIT

WHEN "ACID INDIGESTION" STARTS

CARRY YOUR ALKALIZER WITH YOU ALWAYS

The fastest way to "alkalize" is to carry your alkali with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets—in a flat tin for pocket or purse. Then you are always ready.

Use it this way. Take 2 Phillips' tablets—equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonfuls of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "overcrowding" from hyper-acidity begin to ease. "Acid headaches," "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress—avoid offense to others.

Courage to the Task
Courage consists in equality to the problem before us.—Emerson.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

NO matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month. Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age." Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—It may be, as I have frequently been told, that the average person—Mr. John Q. Public—has very little interest in the doings of the federal reserve system.

It may be true that the average citizen accepts the federal reserve banks as a thing apart and of little or no concern to him because they are so far removed and, further, because they indulge in what the demagogues used to call "high finance."

Whether my information is correct and regardless of the public concept of the federal reserve system, I am devoting some space this week to a discussion of certain developments in the federal reserve banking structure in an attempt to show the trend of money conditions in this country at the moment.

Lately, the federal reserve board of governors announced a revision of its regulations governing discounts and advances by federal reserve banks. Now, it may be said that these regulations affect only the banks that are members of the reserve system. That is true but it is not the whole truth because everything that the federal reserve board of governors and the federal reserve banks do affects you and me and everyone else whether we are little fellows and, therefore, unimportant individually, or whether we are trustees of great sums of money such as is the case with corporation presidents.

The board of governors, in the revision of its regulations, has made it possible—if not obligatory—for the reserve banks to take almost any kind of paper that is an evidence of debt. That is, the reserve banks are now empowered to receive from the member banks that paper upon which you and I borrow, any paper that shows that a citizen owes the bank money, and to give that bank money in exchange for the evidence of that debt.

Everyone, of course, is familiar with a note or a mortgage on a piece of real estate. Most people understand about installment paper which is simply a note providing for payment of the amount due over a period of months. But there are many other kinds of evidence of debt that is in frequent use among business men from the smallest storekeeper in a rural village to the greatest banker in the world. Under the regulations now operative in the federal reserve system there seems to be almost no paper which the local banker cannot send to the federal reserve bank and receive cash in exchange. Of course, that obligation must be paid off some time and the arrangement simply permits the federal reserve banks to carry the debt until its maturity.

All of this obviously sounds as though the federal reserve system is at last to be helpful to us little fellows. That is true. It is going to be helpful in increasing the number of us little fellows who get ourselves in debt. It is going to do that because it makes getting into debt easier.

I think no one should object to the reserve board regulations in all details. There must be credit given where credit is needed; that is to say when you prohibit borrowing money you choke off eighty-five per cent of all of the business done in the United States. Yet, credit is dangerous, a double-edged sword and must be handled with extreme caution by the borrowers as well as by the lenders. As we have seen from the inglorious debacle of 1929, there can be too much credit extended, and when I say that, I refer not only to loans by banks but the sale of goods, wares and merchandise that enter into everyday life. And, going a bit further on that line, there can be too much credit extended by the manufacturer and jobber to retail merchandising establishments just as easily as there can be too much credit extended by the retail merchants to you or to me. One can get into debt over his head just as easily by purchasing at retail or wholesale as by buying more land than we can afford to own or a home larger than we need.

So, a discussion of what the board of governors of the federal reserve system has done can lead in this instance only to a conclusion that danger flags are waving.

I do not want to exaggerate present conditions or signs as I see them.

Don't Get Excited

This is no time to become excited. There are, however, boundaries beyond which we cannot go in the matter of credit without facing another tailspin of the type of 1929. That is the thing I fear may result from an accumulation of federal policies of which the late action by the federal reserve board is only one.

It is perfectly human and natural for each one of us to aspire to better things, to have more of this world's goods for our enjoyment and to equip ourselves by way of greater resources for the future. We will do those things sometimes when we ought not to do them simply because the instruments are available and we do not stop to count the ultimate cost. To the extent, then, that the federal reserve board probably has made borrowing easier it has tempted a certain percentage of citizens, or will tempt them in the future.

The condition of easier debt that is now presented is, as I have said, only one of many temptations and inducements for getting into debt that has been offered by the Roosevelt policies. It is unnecessary to recount here how many pieces of legislation, how many executive and administrative rules have been made to permit citizens to use money that is not their own. They are almost numberless. The result has been, is, and will continue to be the creation of a lot of debt that will hang over us all for years to come.

The federal government itself has taken the lead in getting into debt. The latest Treasury statement shows that the United States government owes more than thirty-seven billion dollars. That amounts to $281.63 for every man, woman and child in the United States. Compare that with the national debt as of 1932 when it stood at $19,500,000,000 or a debt of $155.93 for every living person in the United States.

I do not know when, if ever, this gigantic national debt will be paid off. I think probably the American people with traditional tenacity will stick by the job and get it done some time, but I must refer to the job as a very slow process. It required twelve years after the World war debt reached its peak of twenty-six billion to reduce it by ten millions. That reduction was more rapid than had ever been known before in any nation and it was made possible because of the prosperity which we enjoyed during those twelve years.

It would seem, therefore, that we must consider not only a slowing down of individual debt making, but a sharp curtailment of national debt making as well. If we do not, a yawning cavern of unsounded depths awaits us.

Some weeks ago Mr. Roosevelt sent instructions to the various agencies of the government to save ten per cent out of the operations for the current fiscal year to help in balancing the budget. There were no ifs, nor ands, nor buts about President Roosevelt's instructions. The spending agencies were told simply to lay aside that ten per cent which, in the aggregate, would amount to around four hundred million dollars. The President said during a speech at the great Columbia river dam the other day that he hoped to balance the budget in the next fiscal year. Most other people hope that the President's hope is realized because Mr. Roosevelt has stated several times that the budget will be balanced "next year" and some of us are beginning to wonder whether his budget balancing statements are not like the statements which President Hoover made at the beginning of the depression. He said, you will remember, a number of times that "prosperity is just around the corner," a corner that still seems to be next year.

But Mr. Roosevelt must be commended and criticized at the same time for his budget balancing ideas. Mind you, no criticism can possibly be attached to the objective—a balanced budget. But commendation must give way to criticism on some of the things that are happening under the flat order for a reduction in spending.

Take this case for example: The National Park service, like other agencies, laid away ten per cent of its operations. This impounding of money happened to coincide with the greatest flock of visitors ever to enter the gates of the country's national play grounds. It costs money to police and protect the parks; it requires funds to provide for the comfort of the throngs of visitors to national parks. The result, in the case of several parks, was that they were forced to close their gates to visitors from a week to a month earlier than they usually do in the fall. Their money had run out.

Well, say you, what harm does that do? Simply this: Visitors to national parks, such as Yellowstone, for example, pay much more for entrance fees and the things they must buy while in the parks than it costs the government to maintain the parks.

But that is the crux in this situation. The National Park service does not keep the money that is paid in by park visitors. Those funds are turned directly into the treasury as general revenue. The books of the National Park service, therefore, show only outgo.

The condition is one, therefore, it seems to me, that almost warrants a statement that the policy is "penny wise and pound foolish."

The Sourdough Hotel

IF YOU'VE ever been to Alaska you probably thought it was a good joke on your friends to write a letter to them on the stationery of the Sourdough hotel.

The Sourdough hotel is located at 1333 Icicle avenue and among the house rules are these: towels changed weekly; spiked shoes must be removed at night; anyone troubled with nightmare will find a halter on the bedpost; don't worry about paying your bill—the house is supported by its foundation.

This hotel was the creation of a young newspaper man named E. J. White who went to Alaska during the gold rush of 1898. The primitive living conditions in the boom camp of Dawson appealed to his sense of humor so he had printed several hundred sheets of stationery for his Sourdough hotel.

The gold seekers, seeing in this a chance to play a joke on the folks back home, eagerly bought his stationery at $2 a dozen sheets. White's clever foolery landed him a job on the Klondike Nugget and started him on the career which has made the name of "Stroller" White famous. He's still a newspaper man, publisher of the Juneau Stroller's Weekly, and tourists in Alaska are still writing letters back home on the stationery of the Sourdough hotel.

"Enigmatical Prophecies"

WHEN purchasers of "Poor Richard's Almanac" for the year 1736 opened their copies of that household necessity, some of them, no doubt, were considerably alarmed when they read in it certain "enigmatical prophecies." For "Poor Richard" (otherwise known as Benjamin Franklin) solemnly predicted that during the coming year many of America's greatest cities would soon be under water, that a certain power with which the country was not at war would take great numbers of vessels fully laden out of the seaports of the country, and that an army of musketeers would land in this country to annoy the inhabitants. Furthermore he promised to reveal in the next issue of his "almanac" the proof of these statements if his readers were not aware of these events when they happened.

So they had to wait patiently for a whole year to learn the answers to these enigmas. But, true to "Poor Richard's" promise, the 1737 issue of the almanac did contain the answers.

The water which had covered the great cities was that of the sea and the rivers, raised by the sun in the form of vapor, then descending upon the cities as rain. The power with which the country was not at war was the wind which did indeed "take great numbers of vessels fully laden out of the seaports of the country."

As for the army of musketeers which would land to annoy this country's inhabitants, they were mosquitoes. For "everyone knows they are fish before they fly, being bred in the water; and therefore may properly be said to land before they become generally troublesome."

"Exaltation," nee "Yes, We Have No Bananas"

WHEN Mrs. Sarah Smith exhibited one of her paintings at Claremont, Calif., and the art critics dismissed it from consideration as being "distinctly of the old school," her husband, Paul Jordan Smith, an author and minister who considered his wife an accomplished painter, resolved to get back at those supercilious "experts."

Several months later an art exhibit in Boston included four paintings by "Paval Jerdanovitch," who was called the "supreme master of the disubstratist school of painting." They were named "Aspiration," "Adoration," "Exaltation" and "Illumination." In the catalogue was this statement by their painter, "To those that realize that real art depicts not what we see, but what we feel, hear and smell, these soul-revealing creations will be sources of ecstatic, moronic rapture."

The ultra-modernist critics looked at his paintings, nodded sagely and uttered many laudatory comments on "the rise of a new star in the art firmament." Critics in New York and Chicago, where the paintings were later exhibited, agreed with them, until . . .

"Paval Jerdanovitch" was revealed as Paul Jordan Smith of California who said that he had borrowed some of his wife's canvases and "just slopped on a lot of paint." For instance, "Exaltation," the most famous of the four, had been called "Yes, We Have No Bananas," and had been used as a fire screen in his home. Smith had produced these ultra-impressionistic pictures, he said, "without the slightest knowledge of painting, just to prove that most art critics don't know what they're talking about." Apparently some of them also didn't know the meaning of the word "moronic"!

10. Did the United States have diplomatic relations with the Vatican during the Civil war?

Answers

1. There has never been a round-the-world airplane flight in that such a flight would require girdling the globe at its greatest circumference, either along the equator or along a single degree of longitude.
2. It takes about 10 minutes.
3. The earth is encircled with more than 300,000 miles of submarine cables, 100,000,000 miles of telephone wires and 5,000,000 miles of telegraph cables.
4. Lebanon, in Eastern Smith county, Kan., is the nearest.
5. It is a substance which appears in many vegetable tissues as a constituent of the sap or cell wall. In making jellies its presence causes fruit juice to solidify.
6. Red fruits and vegetables bleach in contact with tin plate and foods with sulphur content discolor the can just as a cooked egg discolors a silver spoon. The stain is harmless but uninviting.

7. There are about 2,000,000,000 people on the earth, according to the 1930 estimates of the International Statistical institute.
8. There are 6,189 registered hospitals in the United States. There are approximately 29,000 hotels.
9. In 1892 a fusion of industrial workers and farmers known as the Populist party, and roughly comparable to the Farmer-Labor party of today, mustered 1,027,000 popular votes and 22 electoral votes. The vote was about one-tenth of the total vote cast.
10. Yes. At the commencement of the Civil war, John J. Stockton of New Jersey was minister resident at the Vatican. He was succeeded by Alexander W. Randall, of Wisconsin on August 9, 1862, Randall was succeeded by Richard Milford Blatchford of New York. Rufus King of Wisconsin succeeded Blatchford on October 7, 1863.

'Twasn't Him

With a grinding of brakes the officer pulled up his car and shouted to a little boy playing in the field: "I say, sonny, have you seen an airplane come down anywhere near here?"

"No, sir!" replied the boy, trying to hide his slingshot. "I've only been shooting at a bottle."

NO OTHER TIRE CAN MATCH ITS PERFORMANCE!
Because
THE GROUND GRIP TREAD IS PATENTED!

FARMERS everywhere know that the Firestone Ground Grip Tire out-performs all other tractor tires. They know its outstanding performance is due to the famous Firestone Ground Grip tread and no other tire can match its performance because this tread is PATENTED. They know also that no other tire can give them so many important money-saving advantages.

GREATER TRACTION—Takes a deeper and broader bite into the soil and has positive self-cleaning action.

GREATER STRENGTH to resist the strain of heavy pulling is provided because every fiber of every cord is saturated with liquid rubber by the patented Firestone Gum-Dipping process. Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread bind the tread and cord body so solidly together that we guarantee the tread will not separate from the cord body.

GREATER SAVINGS—Saves 25% in time and up to 50% in fuel over steel-lugged wheels. Low-cost Firestone cut-down wheel program permits using one set of tires on several different implements.

GREATER DRAWBAR PULL enables this amazing tire to do more work in a given time.

Only genuine Firestone Ground Grip Tires can give you such performance! See this amazing tire today at your nearest Firestone Implement Dealer, Tire Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply & Service Store.
